Special Events

CultureCamp

CultureCamp is a user-generated "unconference"-an open, creative, participatory workshop-event, whose content is provided by participants related to an emerging understanding of culture. CultureCamp invites participants from the community to come share their ideas about our region. Past CultureCamp participants are encouraged to share activity that's taken place as a result of ideas or people they interacted with during previous events. Anyone can present a session or host a discussion around a topic of interest and session order is decided at the event and generated by participants.
